

Bath

Shower with a View

The home's original master bath space was a series of three disjointed rooms that took little notice of the water right outside. With the renovation, the room's orientation was spun around so that all eyes are on the magnificent view. The sleek, functional plan incorporates all the top-end amenities—spa tub, steam shower, his & her vanities, his & her showers—with traditional elements such as bead board, decorative window trims, and French doors leading to an outdoor deck.

“SWS works as a partner. It’s unusual to find a builder with the patience to work through projects with care. They take details to a very high level, making sure transitions are smooth and molding precise. Most of all, they are willing to revisit concerns until everything is thoroughly resolved.”

SWS Builders’ Inside View

“The bathroom is located on the second floor of a converted carriage house. Working with balloon framing requires a lot of thought and engineering; we needed to be especially mindful of putting in enough support and to consider what was directly below on the first floor. We also needed to be creative in relocating the mechanical service connections without compromising the continuous layout or interrupting the views.”
